

History is filled with such successful people who started their lives in extremely difficult circumstances but later on went on to be ~~be~~ counted among the successful & renowned personalities of the world. Success, respect and fame are never handed ^{over} to you on a plate; only wealth can be handed to you on a plate. For that too, there is one condition: your ancestors must have property, only then will you inherit wealth. With wealth, you can buy ~~worldly~~ material luxuries, but you can not buy happiness. Sometimes, it takes a person decades to earn respect, but it takes only a moment to earn disgrace or become controversial.

Translation should be idiomatic