

Purpose Before Profit: The mindset of educated and brave men have you ever seen a title this long ??? of any book or article this a is called a sentence not a title !!!!!!!!!!!

The author emphasises that wisdom and education make a man purpose-oriented rather than materialistic. He does not crave for the money his job rewards instead desires to experience the satisfaction his job brings. His main goal of life becomes serving for a cause, not making money. The fearless and well-taught men consider money important but not more important than their jobs.

main idea is picked but seems like you haven't read the basic rules of precis writing you have changed the nature and context of the main passage completely word count is not written like this

(63 words)

75