

Aima Asghar (34036 -- 064)

History is full of examples of such people who started their journey in perilous conditions but with time secured their name among the successful and well-known personalities of the world. Only wealth is served in a platter, not success, prestige and prominence, that too with the condition that one's ancestors were / ought to be rich. Money can buy material objects, not happiness. Sometimes, it takes ages to earn respect but only a moment to lose it.

History is replete with exemplary individuals who commenced their lives in exceedingly challenging circumstances, yet ultimately became illustrious and renowned personalities.

Success, esteem, and fame cannot be bestowed upon you effortlessly; only wealth can be inherited if you have ancestral assets.

For this, it is also essential that your predecessors have left you some property, only then can you acquire wealth. With wealth, you can buy worldly possessions, but you cannot buy happiness. Sometimes, it takes numerous years for a person to earn respect or fame, and it takes merely a moment to lose it by getting into a dispute or by committing a shameful act.