It is practically impossible for a rightly trained man to choose money over his duty. At a healthy minded people like making money, but for them ; they enjoy the sensation of winning it as the feeling of winning it is better than making a money. Likewise, a good soldier's main mission is to win battles, not to be paid for them; the clergymen's to baptize and preach, not be paid for preaching; and for doctors' to cure the sick patient over their fee. So for rightly trained men, duty comes first than money.

Avoid grammatically confused statements
