Translation of the passage:

History is full of individuals who have started their life with extremely difficult situation. But later they were counted in the list of most successful and renowned people. Success, respect and fame cannot be served in a silver plate; money might be. But it also has a condition that money belongs to your fore-fathers.

History is replete with exemplary individuals who commenced their lives in exceedingly challenging circumstances, yet ultimately became illustrious and renowned personalities. Success, esteem, and fame cannot be bestowed upon you effortlessly; only wealth can be inherited if you have ancestral assets. For this, it is also essential that your predecessors have left you some property, only then can you acquire wealth. With wealth, you can buy worldly possessions, but you cannot buy happiness. Sometimes, it takes numerous years for a person to earn respect or fame, and it takes merely a moment to lose it by getting into a dispute or by committing a shameful act.
