THE ESSAY

"The media's the most powerful entity on earth. They have the power to make the innocent guilty, and to make the guilty innocent, and that's power. Because they control the minds of the masses" said the most active proponent of Black Nationalism, Malcolm X. Apparently, the world is in a simulation; the beings termed as humans are viewing the world and developing perceptions regarding it through words written on stacks of elongated booklets, majorly biased, called newspapers, and through digital sources, which can be analogized with the 'Entity', the all-knowing power from Mission Impossible - Dead Reckoning. The only difference lies in the fact these digital sources in the real world are being controlled through people by people who are more powerful than other people. The infamous digital sources of today are mass media and social media - These two along with the print media have caused havoc in the world around. Given this power to shape perceptions, the media plays a crucial role in shaping narratives around the Palestine - Israel conflict & through its influence on public opinion, the prevalence of bias and misinformation, the challenges of censorship, social media's transformational power, ethical reporting, and media literacy, ultimately affecting the course of conflict and its global understanding.
