Evolution of the Pakistan's Civil Service Perception among Youth

The writer laments about the evolution of Pakistan's Civil Service perception among the youth over time. The very prestigious service, well-known for public service, is now treated as an amalgamation of necessity, obsession, and personal branding. Although, many still choose it for job security, the others perceive it as an obsession. They consider it as a job-for-nothing for which they are willing to sacrifice anything, merely to reach self-actualization. This narrative of self-worth attached with it is further fuelled by social media and the growing influence of in-service-civil servants partly serving as lifestyle influencers. Altogether, the civil service perception has now

1) The writer gives numerous examples to show that food is linked with different situations in Pakistan. These include weekends starting from family meet-up to ending in food corners, rainy days adorned with 'Pakoras', heatwaves overcome with 'Falooda', depression with 'Haleem', and cricket matches enjoyed with snacks. In short, the writer calls food the only entertainment left in Pakistan.

2) Cricket matches often become more about food than the game itself because the game may be stressful and food helps in overcoming that stress. People try to replace the emotions linked with the ups and downs of the game to different foods like snacks and goil gappas.

3) The writer considers amusement parks merely a source of backpain resulting in MRI scan. He actually hints at the infrastructure of amusement parks that could be damaged enough to cause you harm. At the same time, he can also mean that rides in park are not everyone's cup of tea to get along.

4) This means that the choices for people have been increased over time but they lack any meaning to it. For instance the writer says that people know more about different food options but they have no idea about ~~why~~ what they are supposed to do in longer run. All they plan is food, food, and food.
