"Education is not the learning of the facts, but the training of the mind to think."

Albert Einstein

According to Albert Einstein education is not only the process of learning the fact, but it is a training of mind to think. This clearly manifest the importance of education, that education is an important pillar of achieving success, equality, kindness and calmness etc. Therefore, one can easily take stance that education is the most effective tool for achieving gender equality. Gender equality is a complex phenomenon that cannot be achieved through one source or process but one cannot deny the fact that education can play pivotal role in achieving gender equality. There are multiple instances that can show the role of education in between genders. An educated ~~women~~ is not only aware of her fundamental rights but also capable of engaging herself in political processes. Through literacy, women gain the confidence to vote independently, analyse policies and criticize governance failures.

For instance, Rwanda literacy rate is round about 78%, in which women stand at 76%.

Therefore, such a high literacy rate gives them participation in the parliament. According to Rawande statistic report, in Rawande parliament women participation stands at 63.8%. They participate in political policies, government agenda and stand as a leader.

Hence, literacy plays an important role in gender equality accomplishment.

While education remains the most promising pathway to gender equality, its transformative potential is often undermined by deeprooted structural and cultural barriers. Therefore, to understand the limits of education in ensuring equality, it is crucial to highlight the persistent challenges that hinder its impact.

The first and foremost challenge is the gender gap in literacy. The education system is extremely gender-biased.

Gender gap is prevailing in the education system such as the male gender is highly encouraged in every society while women are always attributed to domestic chores. This wide disparity ^{in education} pose threat to gender equality and hinder women participation in politics, governance, finance, technology and environmental management. Pakistan economic Survey 2024-25 report shows literacy gap between male and female, 68% and 52.8% respectively.

Therefore, such a wide disparity and gender gap in literacy hinders the process of achieving gender equality through education.

Secondly, the most visible challenge that pose threat in achieving equality through education is the division of the society in two sphere such as Rural and urban sphere.

Such a division also leads to educational division. For instance the education system that provide by the state in the urban sphere is far more better than the rural education system.

The infrastructure of schools, curriculum and teaching faculty are well equipped than that of Urban education system. According to Pakistan economic Survey report, Punjab stood on top in education, literacy rate is 66.25, while Balochistan literacy rate is 42.01%. The division hamper the inclusivity of all gender in education sector that directly influence gender equality in a society.

Thirdly, women face extreme violence in educational settings; schools, college and universities. Sexual harassment, abusive language and hegemonic attitude of male gender hinder women existence in educational institutions. Therefore, these behaviors direct impact women literacy rate that is again a challenge to gender equality goal. Education that is considered as the most effective tool for the achievement of gender equality, faces challenges in the form of violence against women. According to the UNESCO report, One in three (1:3) learners are bullied at school every month globally. Therefore, these challenges directly affect the presence of women in educational institutions that directly cause gender equality.

Lastly, cultural and traditional barriers cause women inclusion in education. Patriarchal attitude, mindset hinders women education. Traditional barriers such as child marriages, linking women to domestic entities and propositions such as women are made for domestic chores hamper their existence in education. These factors directly hit gender equality. According to UNESCO report 91 million girls left their schooling at age of 16 due to cultural barriers and traditional mindset. Education provides an opportunity to achieve gender equality, however, cultural and traditional factors hinder women's existence in educational institutions that directly affect gender equality.

To sum up the above discussion, education stands as the cornerstone in achieving gender equality because education provides opportunities to all genders to participate in politics, economics, environment and technology. Education has the capacity to incorporate women in politics, because politics need educated individuals to progress. Moreover, education is a catalyst for women inclusion in entrepreneurship and financial programs. It also shield against harmful practices such as Dowry and child marriages. Education gives awareness and knowledge of good and bad and confidence to stand against evil practices.

Furthermore, education provides opportunity to all genders to work as climate agents because climate need educated people.

Women inclusion can also be seen through education in climate and environmental management. However, there numerous challenges in educational section that poses threat to achieving gender equality such as gender gap literacy, rural and urban division and violence against women in educational settings.

Reduces the spirit of gender equality.

Therefore, education must be free for all regardless of caste, creed race and gender to ensure gender equality.
