Q2. Precis

From Public Service to Personal Branding

Title : "Civil Services: a career or lifestyle?"

The civil service of Pakistan used to be about serving the public but now it has become a status symbol. It is rightfully the dream of many as it offers stability and job security in a country like ours. It allows stable income, power and influence which may be why people have developed an obsession with it. This obsession leads aspirants to develop an unhealthy 'all or nothing' attitude which is then glamorized and capitalized upon. This fascination is further promoted by officers on social media who project 'look' of a civil servant, capturing the glamour while leaving out the actual ground work. The social media portrayal of civil services has ignited an interesting debate, while some argue that it helps inspire youth others wonder if it distracts the officer from the gruesome daily tasks.
