06/20

Once viewed solely as a prestigious public service, Pakistan's civil service has evolved into symbol of social prestige. Many pursue it for stability, respect and influence in country. For some, however, it has become an all-consuming obsession tied to self-worth. A new trend adds further complexity: bureaucrats as social media influencers. With curated posts of authority, officers project a life-style image that often overshadows the behind the scene realities of governance.

While inspiring to some, youth,
this shift raises concern about personal branding overtaking
the real role of public servicing.

Ultimately, the image of civil servants, both on and off screen, has become as influential as their actual authority.
