Q.No. 2 (Precis)

Title: From Public Service to Personal Branding

05/20

Precis:

Perception about the civil services in Pakistan, a prestigious career with a good income, influence and power, has changed from public service role to a stage for personal branding. But the dream of civil service has become an obsession, as it is viewed as a measure of self-worth. It is much highlighted and romanticized. People put everything and struggle much to achieve this goal. But now, the <sup>bureaucrats</sup> beauro crates are social media figures, with projection of the look of the civil servants, just like the social media influencers focusing on the transition roles.

This has made them half public servant and half social media influencers.

This may inspire youth, but most people view it as distractive with respect to the governance. ~~This is~~ ~~wasting time.~~

Overall idea is ok
Title needs improvement
Work on Grammar Spellings

This shift blurs lines between public service and influencer culture, raising questions about priorities—governance versus glamour.

1- The examples such as family meetings and heated debates always end with eating Biryani, the rain is linked to pakoras, the heatwaves to falooda and depression is connected to haleem. Moreover, when aliens ever visit to Pakistan, the people will offer them nihari instead of showing them civilization. These all shows how food is linked with different situations in Pakistan.

2- The cricket matches in Pakistan are more about food than the game itself, because in reality, the cricket matches are more about the snacks. People consider the gol-gappas outside the stadium more important than watching the match. That's why, the cricket matches are more about food than the game itself in Pakistan.

3- We can infer from about the author's attitude towards the Pakistan's amusement parks that the parks are so much out-dated and ill-fashioned that it does not function in a proper way. The author express it in a humorous way that ~~one~~ <sup>of it</sup> ride ~~and~~ will
