

Mock Exam English (P & C)

Qno-7

Wish we could play those games again, such as; bat ball, treasure hunt, stapu, and hide and seek.

If we could revive those old days only then we would be able to feel happiness and reassurance.

We would run in the streets with our friends, smile and play and would forget those little fights.

Today, those days are only a memory, and heart feels empty by missing them, when life was simple, prosper and calm.

Two little frogs were playing about at the edge of a pool. When an ox came down to the water to drink, and by accident trod on one of them, and crushed the life out of him. When the old frog missed him, she asked his brother, where he was? "He is dead!", mother said. The little frog; an enormous big creature with four legs, came to our pool this morning and trampled him down in the mud. "Enormous was he was he as big as this", said the frog, puffing herself out to look as big as possible.

"Oh yes! much bigger", was the answer. The frog puffed herself out, "Still more was he as big as this", said she. "Oh, yes, yes! mother, much bigger", said the little frog and yet again she puffed and puffed herself out till she was as almost as round as a ball, as big as she began, but then she burst!

Title: The Deception of Ad Hominem.

Premis:

The author explains the ad hominem fallacy, attacking a person instead of addressing the argument. A famous courtroom joke illustrates this tactic: when there is no solid argument, discredit the opponent instead. Lincoln is shown using a harmless version of this strategy as a young lawyer, turning the jury against his skilled opponent by mocking the man's unusual shirt, and winning the case through psychological insight rather than legal strength. The fallacy, however, is ancient and often misused. While discussing a leader's health, as with Eisenhower Roosevelt's
