Two little frogs were playing about at the edge of a pool when an ox came to the water to drink and by accident trod on one of them and crushed the life out of him.

When the old frog missed him, she asked his brother where he was?

"He is dead, mother," said the little frog, "an enormous big creature with four legs came to our pool this morning and tamped him down in the mud." "Enormous! Was he, was he as big as this?" said the frog, puffing herself out to look as big as possible. Oh, yes, much bigger was the answer.

The frog puffed herself out still more, "Was he as big as this?" said she.

"Oh, yes, yes, mother, much bigger," said

Q.7:

Ans:

Wish that, we could play again those games, like: 'Gali Danda', 'Khazana Ki Talaash', 'Baapu Taapu', and 'Aankh Macholi'. If those old days could return, we could have again enjoyed those unstressed and joyfull moments. We would run with our friends in the streets, would laugh, and would forget the little fights during play.

Today, those days have just become the memories, and heart often misses the warmth of those moments when life was simple, pleasant, and stress-free.

Ad Hominem: A Dangerous Practice

Ad hominem, a dangerous art, practice people have been using around for a long time. Like a classic example of this practice was Lincoln a case which he was about to lose by going away from facing the issue to abusing plaintiff's attorney. People great and have been practicing this since the dawn of the race for their personal gains. There are many cases where people, parties, groups have practiced a far more dangerous kind of ad hominem. Like, President Eisenhower, though not being well enough to serve in the toughest
