Question no. 03 : Punctuation

The historian paused, looked directly at the audience, and said, "The fall of ancient civilizations cannot be attributed to a single cause. However, we must consider several interconnected factors including environmental degradation, economic instability, and political corruption. Moreover, the notion that these societies simply vanished is absurd.

They transformed, evolved and, in many cases, their descendants continue to thrive today. When examining primary sources from that era, particularly letters written by merchants, farmers, and government officials, we discover a far more complex narrative than traditional textbooks suggest. Dr. Ahmed, one of the leading scholars in this field, has argued that we must read between the lines to understand what really happened. The evidence he claims speaks for itself."

Question 01 : Précis

Title: "A Reflection of Relationship between Horses and Human Societies"

The relationship between humans and their tamed animals is a broader reflection of culture of particular regions of the world. In medieval era, horsemanship was considered an art which people could master by the observation of the animal, not learning. Those who mastered this knowledge knew about the details of bloodlines and characteristic features of horses. They used to consolidate the knowledge to themselves out of jealousy. They could judge the worth of horses by observing their physical and behavioural traits; thus, explaining which social services the horse could provide better. Moreover, those who could design horse shoes and could treat
