Ad hominem an astute skill

In British court, as attorney takes desk, a note hands over to him; there is no ~~any~~ factual claim against the evidence just go against the belief or characteristics. This story is about Lincoln's sharp political and ad hominem skill, when he was standing against a seasoned veteran. When Lincoln was losing, his opponent's white-shirt provided him a chance to put factual claim against it. As he knew, on his turn, he put the opponent's shirt on agenda while manipulating the jury. His ad-hominem won him a case. This type of delective reasoning has been around for a long time, as in Presidential nominations of Eisenhower (1956) and FDR in 1944. The use of ad hominem against the FDR government was visible in the stance of opposition that originated from "that cripple in the White House".

Two little frogs were playing about at the edge of a pool, when an ox came down to the water to drink, and by accident trod on one of them and crushed the life out of him. When the old frog missed him she asked her brother, "Where he was", "he is dead! mother", said "the little frog an enormous big creature with four legs came to our pool this morning, and trampled him down in the mud." "Enormous was he", "was he?" "As big as this" said, the frog puffing herself out to look as big as possible. "Oh yes! much bigger", was the answer. The frog puffed herself out "still more was", "he as big as this", said. She "oh yes! yes!", mother much bigger" said, the little frog and yet again the puffed and puffed herself out till she was almost as round as a ball as big as she began but then — she burst.
