Ald Hominem: The Classic Way to Win from the Opponent

Title: Ald Hominem: A Classic Way to Win from Opponent.

Lincoln was a lawyer. In his one of the first jury cases he was fighting for a case in which all the positive points went into his opponent's court. His opponent was an experienced and abled lawyer. So he was advised by his fellow to attack on personal capabilities of the opponent. When the trial was going on and the opponent lawyer stood up to present his points, Lincoln pointed towards his dressing that he use the unconventional way accidentally. Lincoln convinced the jury that a person who couldn't even dress properly, how could he defend anyone. Consequently, Lincoln won the case. Author emphasizes that this is the trick that has been used by many to out their competitors from the race as happened with wilson & Roosevelt. Their policies were targeted due to their health conditions.

Translation:.

I wish we could play again our childhood games such as Tipcat, treasure hunting, Hopscotch and hide and seek. If those old days could rewind, we could feel those moments of happiness & chill moments. We would play with our friends and forget those small fights during the play. Those days are now confined to memories and, we often long for those moments when life was simple, carefree and full of pleasure.
