

PART - II

QUESTION - 2

Title :-

~~Precis~~- Ad hominem in Government Systems

Precis :-

In the text, the writer highlights the malady often seen in government systems. Highlighting the example from British court of law, where attorney of defendant abuses the attorney of plaintiff instead of defending the actual issue. Another story is about Lincoln, who was a young lawyer. He cleverly used ad hominem against an experienced trial lawyer in one of his cases. He pointed out at the tucked buttons at the back of the experienced lawyer and said to the judge that he was sure that the judge will not be influenced by his apparent knowledge of law. Resultantly, Lincoln's ad hominem won the case. Similarly, writer argues that this trend have been practicing for a long time - from Sophists to President Eisenhower to Franklin Roosevelt and he suspects that this mal practice might have went back to the races of people.

QUESTION # 7.

Translation.

wishfully we were able to play the games such as Tipcat, Treasure Searching, Hapu Tapu, and Hide and Seek. If those old days returned, we would have felt the moments of happiness and carelessness. We would have ran across the streets, laughed and forgot the small fights during playing. Those days have become only memories, and heart feels the deficiency of those moments when life was simple, pleasurable and careless.
