Two little frogs were playing about at the edge of a pool. When an ox came down the water to drink and by accident trod on one of them and crushed the life out of him. When the old frog missed him, she asked his brother where he was. "He is dead, mother." said the little frog. "An enormous big creature with four legs came to our pool this morning and trampled him down in the mud; enormous was he as big as this." said the frog puffing herself out to look as big as possible. "Oh yes, much bigger." was the answer, the frog puffed herself out still more. "Was he as big as this?" said she. "Oh yes! yes mother, much bigger." said the little frog and; yet again, she puffed and puffed herself out till she was almost as round as a ball, as big as she began but then she burst.

Q7

Translation

I wish that we could again play games like Tip-cat, Treasure hunt and hide and seek.

If those old days returned, we would enjoy those happy and carefree moments.

We would play with friends, laugh and ~~forget~~ forget small fights within games. Those days have now just become memories.

Heart/soul often long for those moments when life was simple, joyful and carefree.

ad hominem: an easy escape

A scene in a British court of law is a classic example of how defence attorney uses character assassination instead of strong argumentation to deal with allegations and opponent. Similarly, a young lawyer Lincoln in his first jury case used these tactics against his opponent experienced trial lawyer by making remarks about his shirt. Lincoln knew the reaction of the jury and in his plea he tried to ^{mock and} ~~↑~~ equate the knowledge of opponent to the way he buttoned up his shirt. This fallacy have been used for a long time as in case of The health of President Eisenhower in 1956 and Franklin Roosevelt in 1944.
