The Ad Hominem Fallacy: Attacking the Man, Not the Argument

Fallacy in Courts and Politics

In the British court of law, the attorney for defense receives a note from his partner to subdue the opponent's attorney and his personality when he finds it difficult to counter the argument. As directed by the partner, Lincoln shifts his discussion from "ad rem" to ad hominem and wins the case. After carefully observing opponent's attire, Lincoln criticized him while supporting his <sup>own</sup> justifications. Similar tactics have been ~~the~~ used since long. President Eisenhower was questioned about his health during nomination for second term. Similarly, Franklin D. Roosevelt faced accusations of wrong policy. This was continuation of old tactic of fallacy used since long ago.

Two little frogs were playing about<sup>at</sup> the edge of a pool. When an ox came down to the water to drink and by accident trod on one of them and crushed the life out of him. When the old frog missed him, she asked his brother where he was. "He is dead, mother," said the little frog. "An enormous big creature with four legs came to our pool this morning and trampled him down in the mud". Enormous! was he as big as this", said the frog puffing herself out to look as big as possible. "Oh yes, much bigger", was the answer. The frog puffed herself out still more. "Was he as big as this?", said she. "Oh yes yes mother, much bigger", said the little frog. And yet again she puffed and puffed herself out till she was almost as round as a ball. As big as she began but then she burst.
