Title:

Ad Hominem: a Winning
Tactic

07/20

The author explains ad hominem as a fallacy which was practiced in British courtroom as a winning tactic. Lawyers attacked opponents personally when they lack strong arguments. The author cites another story of a young lawyer, Lincoln. Despite losing the case initially, he turned the case in his own favour by using the same technique. He swayed the frontiermen in the court by mocking his opponent's fashionable back-buttoned shirt. This tactic has long existed in politics whether it was the case of questioning the nomination of President Eisenhower citing his health or calling the Franklin Roosevelt a cripple in the white house to discredit his policies which was the harsh

Two little frogs were playing about at the edge of a pool when an ox came down to the water to drink, and by accident, trod on one of them and crushed the life out of him. When the old frog missed him, she asked his brother where he was. "He is dead," mother said, "The little frog! An enormous big creature with four legs came to our pool this morning and trampled him down in the mud." "Enormous!" was he as big as this?", said the frog puffing herself out to look as big as possible. "Oh! yes", "much bigger", was the answer. The frog puffed herself out still more. "Was he as big as this?", said she. "Oh yes yes!", mother, "much bigger", said the little frog and yet again she puffed and puffed herself out till she was almost as round as a ball. "As big as! she began but then she burst.

I wish that could play those games again of childhood such as finding gilli danda, treasure hunts, hopscotch, and hide-and-seek the treasure, Gulli-danda and Ankh macholi. If we could go back to the past time, we would again feel the happiness of those moments. When we lived happily and laughing together with our friends. Those moments has became memories now and heart feels a longing for them, when life was simple, ~~and~~ pleasant and carefree.
