The fallacy of Ad Hominem

Overall understanding the idea is ok

Title needs improvement

Grammar is ok

The passage discusses the fallacy of ad Hominem, where instead of addressing a real issue or an argument, one attacks the person presenting it. A British Court, experience illustrates this tactic, while Lincoln's clever use of it in a jury case shows its persuasive power. His opponent's ~~unusual~~ unusual shirt became the focus, swaying the jury despite strong legal points against. This fallacy has existed since old times, even used by Sophists and seen in modern politics. While sometimes witty, ironic, it can also be malicious, as in attacks on Roosevelt's worsening disability which diverted attention from real-world
