The Ad Hominem Fallacy: Attacking the Man, Not the Argument

06/20

The fallacy of ad hominem

Q2. Ad hominem is a fallacy used in British courts pertaining to attacking a person by ignoring the substance of their argument, and commenting on the opposing attorney when one's own case is weak. It was used by Lincoln when he was younger, his opposition had a strong argument, and was a veteran trial lawyer so Lincoln used ad hominem to sway the jury. He abused his opponent to distract the jury from his weak case, and it worked; he won. This fallacy is historic, and was even used to criticize President Eisenhower, and Franklin Roosevelt quite harshly.

Q7. I wish we could play games again, games like Tiptoe, Hopscotch, treasure hunts, and hide and seek. If those old days returned, we could experience those happy and carefree moments again. We would race in alleys with our friends, and while laughing and playing would forget about small squabbles. Those days are just memories now, and the heart often misses those times, moments, when life was simple, joyful and carefree.
