Test - 3

Q no 1

True Spirits of Sportsmanship

Sportsmanship generally means having some characteristics like fairness, persistence, courage and self-control for treating fairly with competitors and organizers. To showcase true sportsmanship one should possess four elements; equity, having will of winning, justice and good team. Balance among all four is necessary to ensure true sportsmanship.

If winning is prioritized over playing fair, then conflict can arise.

Questions can arise on those players who ~~believe~~ <sup>the</sup> sportsmanship of those players who neglect any of elements of true sportsmanship.

Selfishness in sports is reciprocal to sportsmanship, although current players prioritize winning over true sportsmanship.

The icons of the majority sports automatically become the benchmark setters for the community. Rule breakers are the offenders of the sport categorized as sore losers and bad winners. One considers others as reason of loss and the other degrades the opponent by behaving improperly and creating situations for losers to question their self-esteem. Eventually both result into bad sportsmanship for not respecting others.
