Q NO. 3 Answer the Questions of Paragraphs-

Q1. Renewable energy resources has also environmental impacts. For solar panels, the mining and extraction of cadmium and tellurium damages environment. For wind turbines the production of steel, concrete and rare earth magnets produces greenhouse gases, disrupts environment and put burden on finite sources of nature. Mining of lithium, cobalt and nickel for electric vehicles also destroy natural habitats of species, soil contamination, over use of water. Plantation of solar panels and wind turbines leads to deforestation, destruction of habitats and disruption of environment.

Q2: Electrical vehicles are not so much environment friendly as are supposed to be. Electric vehicles production causes pollution. Mining of lithium, cobalt and nickel destroy natural habitats, soil erosion, over-usage of water are impacts of electrical vehicle production. These charging also effects environment if it comes from hydrocarbons.

Q3: Life-span of solar panel and wind turbines ranges from 20 to 30 years. Then comes the proper disposal of them recycling of these materials are not in practice and disposal leads to accumulation of toxic waste. A proper management system is required for its disposal.

Q4. The article suggest that renewable energy resources are not entirely pollution free because mining of metals, destruction of habitate, deforestation, soil erosion and accumulation of toxic waste in environment are the main causes which made clean energy a utopia.

Q5. A balanced perspective is advocated not to blindly consider renewables the solution of all environmental impacts rather focus on energy efficiency enhancement, reduce the consumption of energy and diversify and use mix energy.
