

: Test 3:

: Qno1:

Precis:

Sportsmanship is considered a primary attribute of a sportsman, but it varies person to person. It encompasses fairness, courage, persistence and self-control. Moreover, it is also the way one treats and reacts to others. One must keep a balance among all the elements to illustrate true sportsmanship. Otherwise, conflict may arise within aspects of sportsmanship. For instance, the desire to win more may compromise equity and fairness. Similarly, in present sporting culture, more importance is given to winning while completely ignoring sportsmanship. Every sport is rule driven, where cheating and rule breaking is offence. The one who exhibits poor sportsmanship after losing is a sore loser, while the one who wins is a bad winner. A sore loser blames others for his defeat and make excuses while a bad winner gloats about his win and disrespects the opponents. Disrespecting your opponent is also considered bad sportsmanship.

~~as~~ :
Title : Significance of True Sportsmanship

Qno 2:

Comprehension Paragraph

Ans no 1:

In the era of information, media often disseminates sensationalized content, while ignoring the accuracy. This leads to the spread of false information. As a result, it becomes challenging for the public to distinguish between false and credible information, which ultimately leads to confusion.

Ans no 2:

The media's role in framing the issues play a pivotal role in shaping public perception about complex topics. It may reduce multifaceted issues to polarized viewpoints which leads to lack of understanding. This may ultimately lead to confusion and people may struggle to comprehend the complex topics.

Ans no 3:

The constant <sup>exposure to</sup> information in the 24/7 news cycle contributes to information overload, which makes it difficult for the individuals to process vast amount of information.

This overload of information leads to cognitive fatigue and reduces people's ability to critically analyze information.

Ans no 4:

Conflicting cultural messages from media influence societal expectations because advertisements, entertainment and news content may convey contradictory values. It creates controversies and may lead to extremist ideologies and viewpoints.

: Qno 3:

- 1.) conformity
- 2.) exhaust
- 3.) improve
- 4.) dilute
- 5.) depressing
- 6.) weaken
- 7.) separate
- 8.) hopeless
- 9.) small
- 10.) augment