Question no: 02

I Precis

The tradition of oratory in ancient and modern worlds.

Oratory in the ancient time had been considered as a prestigious task, aimed to save something for the next generation as well. Unfortunately, it is going to be extinct in modern days. As people do not like to be like the orators. Also, they have not much time to go for the perfection for what they will utter. Hence, indulging in the busy and modern life, they speak without thinking. But, even in the modern days, Sir Winston Churchill is one of the greatest examples as a saviour of this tradition. He spoke his words with such care and with grace. That is why he has successfully fabricated his name as the golden figure in the modern history.
