Question # 2 (Comprehension)

(Q # 1)

Sensationalism and prioritization of click-worthy content over accuracy can lead to the spread of false or misleading information. Social media platforms can amplify misinformation, creating an environment where rumors, conspiracy theories and unverified claims thrive. As a result, the public may find it challenging to distinguish between credible information and falsehoods, contributing to confusion.

(Q # 2)

Media's role in framing issues can shape public perception in a way that oversimplifies complex matters or perpetuates binary narratives. Nuanced and multifaceted issues may be reduced to polarized viewpoints, leading to a lack of understanding and an oversimplified worldview.

(Q # 3)

24/7 news cycle is the constant bombardment of information that contributes to information overload, making it difficult for individuals to process and make sense of the vast amount of content. This overload can lead to cognitive fatigue, reducing people's ability to critically analyze information and contributing to a sense of confusion.

(Q#4)

Advertisements, environment, and news content may convey contradictory values, leading to confusion about societal expectations and individual identity. The portrayal of unrealistic standards, conflicting role models and divergent cultural <sup>messages</sup> ~~narratives~~ can contribute to a sense of disorientation and uncertainty.

Question # 1

(Precis)

Sportsmanship is the way how a person reacts to a sport, game or player. The four elements of sportsmanship are good form, the will to win, equity and fairness. For true sportsmanship, these elements should be present in a balanced form. But if a person desires to win <sup>is</sup> more than play in equity and fairness, then these elements result in conflict. In today's sporting culture, the standards on sportsmanship are made by the elite level sportsmen. Thus, they are seen as role models in society. A competitor with poor sportsmanship is called a 'sour loser' who blames others for the loss and not accepting responsibility for personal actions, while 'bad winner' holds good sportsmanship and he or she rubs the win in the faces of opponent.
