Good and Bad Sportsmanship

Sportsmanship is a virtue characterized as enduring traits in an individual. This includes fairness, self-control, courage and persistence. It is also the way of treating the people and reacting to game or player. True sportsmanship is reflected through four balanced elements: good form, the will to win, equity and fairness. If any of these aspects are ignored it may cause a conflict, dismissing from being a good sportsman. Also, self-centered athlete deviate from its true idea. Today's sporting culture lacks sportsmanship and values to win the competition. Breaking the rules for gaining <sup>unfair</sup> advantage is regarded as bad sportsmanship. Exhibiting this, after winning or losing game, a competitor is called sore loser and bad winner respectively. Sore loser does not accept ~~their~~ his fault or actions leading to the defeat. While bad winner showcases his victory by looking down upon his opponents. Bad sportsman disrespects the other teams in competition.
