

Q.No:3

(i) Renewable energy is not a perfect and complete solution for environment protection, because it has numerous limitations along with potential advantages. However, it is a critical component to save the environment ahead of traditional fossil fuels. Therefore, knowing limitations of renewable energy, adaptable measures should be taken to make it eco-friendly. Regardless limitations, renewable energy is the better option than fossil fuels to some extent.

(ii) Electric vehicles are presently considered as environmental friendly. But it looks like that is also an imperfect as well as imbalanced narrative. The production of Electric vehicles requires significant materials which can be extracted from earth through mining. Mining is damaging to the lifecycle of mother earth. However, to some extent electric vehicles have potential to environmental friendly.

Meanwhile, a careful management can make it more beneficial.

(3) Solid waste also causing pollution in the environment. Although, renewable energy systems are eco-friendly comparatively to traditional non-renewable energy systems.
However, the renewable energy systems adding a significant amount of disposable waste after life span of such system ends. This waste causes land pollution in significant amount. It can cause environmental degradation. Therefore, a robust mechanism of recycling is much needed solution.

(4) Either it is production phase or operational phase, renewable energy system is not entirely pollution free. Though it is comparatively less harmful than non-renewable, but still lacks the reliance entirely pollution free mechanism. In operational phase, Renewable energy system requires power resources, either from fossil fuels or battery needed raw material, which ultimately comes from earth. Additionally, land use is another demerit of renewable energy system. To sum up this, renewable energy systems are not fully pollution free and eco-friendly system.

(5) The article provides a few suggestions to address the limitations of the renewable energy systems. Though it requires a lot of careful management and pragmatic measures to address the limitations of renewable energy. However, by improving energy efficiency, minimizing the energy usage and alternative mechanism can reduce the limitations to some extent. Therefore, a holistic approach be taken to topple down the causes which affects environment.

Few students of competitive examination think that they will become toppers by looking at books as wink of eye, or setting notes with them everytime. They are those who work for a night and keep asking for prayers. no one has magical faint, nor there is any shortcut to success. If outstanding results are needed, than outstanding preparation is required. success comes with hardwork, not with fun.

POLITICIANS: BASTIONS OF SELF-INTEREST.

Politicians who are expected to be saviors of public, but they are fixated to dialogues only. If someone ask about performance, they just deal with language of their own and leave the asking person with no words. They just know the art of fake promises, before election they give the expectations of heaven and just after election processed, they leave their voters in the hell. They are actually well trained actor to perform in theater, by manipulating public emotions. They do not value intellectuality, rather they respect their puppets. They are quite intelligent for their own rights. Rather to serve the public, they focused to perfection of their acting performance.
