Q # 03

Comprehension:

(1) The production of renewable energy resources is not completely favourable to the environment. For instance, solar panels needs some rare-earth elements, which are extracted through a process of mining that damage the environment. Moreover the wind turbines need steel and some rare-earth magnets whose manufacturing also pollute environment.

(ii) The EVs are environment friendly, but to some extent. The manufacturing process of lithium-ion batteries also ~~very~~ involves mining of Li, Co and Ni that results in habitat destruction, and contamination of soil. Moreover if the batteries are being charged from electricity that comes from fossil fuels, then EVs are not good for environment.

(iii)

The disposal of renewable energy resources results in the accumulation of toxic gases. There should be a robust infrastructure to manage these resources after their lifespan ends.

(iv)

The renewable energy resources are not entirely pollution free.

The reality is neither someone has "the magic wand" nor there is any "shortcut" to the success. If someone want extra-ordinary success then one has to do extraordinary hardwork. So next time, when you, holding a cup of tea, thinks that whether I should study or not, remember one thing that success can be achieved by hard work and efforts not by fun.

at verbosity. Even to answer a simple inquiry they use exaggerated phrases to evade the question. They can make promises that are forgotten immediately after the elections. Their theatrical skills are also worth praising as their pre-planned pictures with a baby or stray dog are more powerful than pen and sword. Moreover, their art of self-defence is ~~also~~ the another skill of our politicians. In short, their motive is to perform well rather than to serve the public.
