C- Conclusion.

"What do do with the degree when it cannot bring my family, food for only two days." This was a reply from a Bachelor degree holder caught by Police while he was snatching a phone. That's what colonialism did to many states like Pakistan.

People are more eager to make themselves better due to the effect of colonialism. Colonialism was very common in 80's - 90's. Many countries capture other countries by different means and then rule on them.

Make their own laws and appoint rulers by their own will.

Countries that are effected by this system or part of that colony had to suffer a lot after taking independence and within that era. These states are less progressive because colonialism left mark on them, they have the typical mindsets of slavery. Colonialism is the reason of necessary evil for modern progress because it had affect people in almost every sector. People find different ways in order to have what they want. In Politics, issues of horse-trading, corruption all such progress is due to colonialism. Similarly, Students and patients are not satisfied due to old and shadow systems.

This issue went on in economic sector, where there is unequal distribution of resources by the people sitting in upper positions, they exploit poors and much more. Colonialism is also an evil for modern progress in society because, people think like colonizers, there is no difference of truth or lie for people when it comes to themselves. Thus, politically, economically, socially and administratively people are affected by colonization, that leads ^{them} to illegal paths in order to make progress. So, colonialism is a necessary evil for modern progress.

In Politics, Colonialism is a necessary evil for modern progress. As, politics of colonial countries is still affected by them. Thus So, when they work with that mindset it become evil for modern progress. Concept of politics remain the same but ways become different like, horse trading. For instance, Pakistan was a colony of British separated from them in 1947, In the era of British rule, many Rajas of Pak-India was brought in order to give their states to British-Raj. That's what's going on in Pakistan today. Politicians do horse trading to take Prime Minister seat, to make laws and much more. Thus, it affects progress. A country never prosper when they have leaders that came from illegal ways, people rebel such government and there is no peace in the country. Like Bangladesh, Sheikh Haseena was doing politics by herself, she was involved in making illegal policies and corruption cases. Bangladesh was not progressing and that results in a revolution against her.

Thus, Colonialism is an evil for making progress in the field of politics of colonial countries.

Furthermore, in the field of education, colonialism becomes evil. In many countries, there is the same method of educating students that was during colonialism, same is the case with syllabus and education system. Progress cannot be made and, if, made it is not in a good manner due to the effect of colonialism. In subcontinent, when British-Raj was going on, and every student of subcontinent wanted to go to abroad in order to get higher education and a good, wealthy lifestyle. That is the same thing that goes on even today.

Students or a young boy of Pakistan just want to earn money and they have chosen education as a way because study visa is often accepted by foreign countries. Colonialism had feeded them that way, education system gave them degrees, but, not education. They learn how to solve mathematics equation but failed to deal with the problems of real life. They have become engineers but not humans. Progress has been made in educational sector but, the reason of education has been lost. Crammers had been produced, learners had been killed due to the effect of colonialism.

Similarly, In economic sector modern progress has been done like; making new billing system, digital banking and much more. But, the effect of colonialism that is evil for it remains same.

More progress leads to more unequal distribution of resources.

In British-Raj, Britishers took wealth, food even children from subcontinent people in order to have their supercession. Everyone was monitored by them. Wealth earned or coming from exports was taken by Britishers and then was unequally distributed.

Same goes now, by making different progressive ways in modern era, colonial countries are facing many problems.

like Hacking, People in these countries did illegal hacking and transfer money to their banks. Similarly, Funds announced by govt are never given to these people who owe it. Thus, economically people are affected by colonialism and, it leads to the evil for modern progress.
