"Erosion of Sportmanship"

Sportmanship is characterized as interpersonal concepts of treating other with sportmanship principles. It has the respect of authority and opponent groups. The sportmen need to balance all four elements of sportmanship but if not balance may lead to clashes and problems due to athletes desire to win. The players are self-centered due to which they ignore the principles like equality and fairness. In modern elite sport culture, they focus on the ideas of competition and winning and do not respect for sportmanship principles. In spite of that, they considered as a leader and role model in society. Those who violate the sport rules are facing
