In comprehension answer each question comprehensively
Do not be irrelevant in your answer

The article says that even though renewable energy is cleaner than fossil fuels, its production still harms the environment. Making solar panels and wind turbines uses a lot of resources and causes pollution, such as mining for rare materials and producing greenhouse gases.

2) How far are the electric vehicles (EVs) environmentally friendly?

Electric vehicles (EVs) are not ^{completely} environmentally friendly, while they are better than regular cars, making EVs involves mining materials like lithium and cobalt, which harm the environment. Also, if the electricity used to charge EVs comes from fossil fuels, their environmental benefits are much less. Disposal of their batteries also creates pollution.

After solar panels and wind turbines are used for about 20 to 30 years, they need to be disposed of. Recycling of them is difficult, and most of ~~them~~ the time, these materials end up as toxic waste, which harms the environment.

4) Why does the article suggest that renewable energy is not entirely pollution-free during its operational phase?

Renewable energy like solar and wind power still causes some pollution during use. Since these energy sources do not work all the time so fossil fuels or batteries are needed for backup. Batteries have environmental issues because of the mining of materials like lithium and cobalt.

5) How does the article propose addressing the limitations of renewable energy?

The article suggests that we should not blindly trust on renewable energy as the perfect solution. Instead of this we should also focus on using energy more efficiently, reducing our energy use, and using different types of energy to solve the problem.
