1- Culture | Civilization
Definition

" Culture is that complex whole which includes knowledge, customs, beliefs and traditions, any other capabilities acquired by a man as a member of a society.

(Edward B. Taylor)

" Civilization is the particular stage of human development, characterized by the presence of cities, writing, and a system of government."

(Arnold J. Toynbee)

Etyymology

The term "culture" originates from Latin word "cultura" means to cultivate or grow.

The term civilization comes from the Latin "civitas" (city or citizen) and is associated with the development of cities.

Tangible Vs. Intangible

Culture encompasses both tangible and intangible aspects of society.

Tangible : food, architecture etc.

Intangible : beliefs, rituals, symbols, language and values etc. Culture is mainly comprised of intangible aspects.

Civilization represents the tangible, external manifestations of societal progress such as governance and political system, economic institutions, technological advancements, and urbanization etc.

Elements

Elements of culture include values, beliefs, norms, language, symbols etc.

Elements of civilization include cities, social classes, religion, governance, writings and job specialization etc.

Scale and Complexity

Culture exists at all levels of social organization, from small tribes to nations.

Civilization emerges when societies reach a level of complexity that allows for governance, division of labour etc.

Dynamics of Change

Culture is dynamic and evolving. It quickly adapts to new ideas, innovations and influence.

Civilization tends to evolve gradually over long periods. Civilizations also face cyclical phases of rises and fall.
