Political Leadership: Performance Over Service
Leadership: less about serving the populace and more about perfecting the performance

08/20

Avoid lengthy titles

Understanding of the idea is ok

Title needs improvement.

Grammar is ok.

Despite integrity, populists, politicians are devoid of practical struggle. Their style of governance is verbal which is empty from concrete steps. This is obvious by the fact that, when one questions them, their words are filled with knowledge, but when one questions them about the course of actions, then they have nothing to answer for. Like the hypofervid of autumn leaves. Above all one has to pay honour to their skill of verbosity because this art is as effective as it brings tears in public. Also it would be a mistake, if one would not pay tribute to their art of self-preservation. They shape themselves according to the changing political environment. There, leadership in politics is an art of performance without action.

Avoid examples

Ultimately leadership in politics is more about perfecting the art of performance than genuinely serving the people.
