Question No. 2

Precis

Title:-

The Decline of oratory and Churchill as an orator 3

The oratory was highly regarded in ancient times. The orators used to engage themselves on the task of highest worth and value. However, the oratory has declined in the modern era. The rise of written communication, broadcasting and the fast pace of the world have lessened the interest of people in the more polished and ornate kinds of speaking. However, Sir Winston Churchill was a great orator as like of orators of ancient times. He used to craft his speeches with much consideration and convey his ideas in effective language.

For more than fifty years, he has addressed the great national and international issues with his eloquence speeches that have become historical masterpieces. His speeches will serve as an example for the world and will be woven in fabrics of the history of the world. They will also pay tribute to the greatest creator of his time.
