Politicians become immersed when it comes to gain public show themselves as well wisher for the public and gain votes. The politicians knows the art of twisting of words to show like they are most genuine with the public, when needed, they will speak good words about their performance and gain public sympathy and favor. They also make fake promises with people to gain votes. These promises are never fulfilled after election. They will even show fake sympathies and weak actions of society. Also, they never remains stick to one statement and changes it based on the situation. So, politicians do nothing and shows like they work the most.

Ultimately, leadership in politics is more about perfecting the art of performance than genuinely serving the people.
