Title: Politicians: Masters of the Political Stage

Antics of our Political Class 06/20

Anyone can be amazed by the volubility and skillful evasion of politicians. They showcase command over rehetorics, when they are asked about anything. Roundabout way of speaking and using long ^{words} are the tactics used by them which leaves the inquisitor in the puzzle of words. Their promises are often fake to get votes and once they are elected they forget promises. To gain the sympathy of public they often shed crocodile tears and don't even remain firm on their stance and ideology. So, leadership is more about performance rather than serving the public.
