

Q:3

(Q:1)

Arab leaders changed their attitude towards Pakistan because they were deeply impressed by its mastery of ~~the~~ digital warfare and disciplined military conduct. Previously Pakistan had often been treated with disdain in the region. However, it is sophisticated and effective use of cyber capabilities during the conflict showcased a technologically advanced and strategically discipline side, transforming its image from a secondary player to a formidable power.

(Q:2)

The blackout in Delhi pre-paralyzed communications and spread panic across the India capital. This sudden loss of control and infrastructure disrupted the normal functioning of government and military communication system, creating psychological disarray and vulnerability. It signaled that Pakistan's retaliation had not only achieved tactical success but also managed to undermine India's sense of security and control.

Q:3

Without the launch of digital warfare, Pakistan's response would have ~~remained~~ remained within the realm of conventional retaliation, such as missiles and artillery strikes. While those have inflicted damage, they likely would not have had the same strategic or psychological impact. India might have ~~recognized~~ regrouped and continued the conflict with its remaining resources. The ~~as~~ absence of cyber warfare would have allowed India to retain operational command systems, communication channels, and ~~their~~ air defence capabilities, potentially prolonging and intensifying the conflict.

Q:4

Traditional military force in the passage included the use of air-defence systems, missile batteries and artillery, which played a ~~crucial~~ crucial role in the initial physical defence and retaliation. For example, shooting down five Rafals and targeting India military installations created immediate impact.

In contrast, digital warfare involved disabling Command Systems, blinding satellites, jamming air defence radars, and disrupting Communication all of which were achieved without conventional firepower.

Q:5

Answer:-

This episode reveals that 21 Century power is no longer defined solely by physical military strength, such as tanks, missiles, or aircraft.

Instead, technological sophistication, especially in digital and cyber capabilities, defines modern power. The ability to wage invisible yet effective warfare disrupting systems without physical destruction is now central to national strength.
