The Only way to do great work is to love what you do.

Doing a great work requires more than just a skill or hard work it demands passion. As Steve Jobs (Apple CEO) said 'The only way to do great work is to love what you do'. This statement holds a very powerful meaning in it self. loving work makes a person to enjoy what they are doing, making them to become more efficient, creative, motivated, dedicated and enthusiastic to do it. loving a work turns obstacles into opportunity. Moreover the most important thing it gives mental, inner peace. When people are fully committed and love what they are doing they pass all challenges and obstacles for creating something new (whether in sports, science, art, history, physics, technology or etc). Without passion the work become mere routine with it, even the most challenging task become meaningful.

Passion fuels persistence, creativity and innovation. History is full of repeated individuals who revolutionized their field, not merely because they were talented, but was deeply in love with what did. we can take example of our Pakistan Noble prize winner Malala Yousafzai, her dedication towards education. Passion leads them to face adversity and that to exceptional accomplishment. These dedication and love towards work results in fueling these efficiency and creativity.

When you are passionate and caring about your work it pushes you to cross all the obstacles in the way that are coming. You work day and night because it is passion and you love to do what you are doing irrespective of time, rest, eating and all your commitment. Resultantly you achieve something extra and more. As we are having example of many individuals from the history like Steve Jobs and Elon Musk. Steve Jobs the currently CEO of Apple started a company from his passion and worked day and night but was unable to make a big company, then forcefully he switched his job to other company like Next etc. As his passion was on other side he came back to Apple company work there many years and made the leading mobile company in the world. This all was because of his dedication and passion.

We are having an example of Marie Curie who achieved two Nobel prizes (Physics and Chemistry) first woman to achieve noble prize. She was dedicated and had passion to explore things. She does research for whole days without having break because she loves her work. And resultantly she achieved the biggest prize in the world Noble Peace prize two times. She invented Radioactivity, Radium, Polonium like elements in chemistry periodic Table. Radio active elements are used most commonly now a day in x-rays which is the most important thing if any unforeseen happen, so it was a one of greatest inventions. These example shows that Passion leads to extraordinary. Because Passion make the person to do it without giving importance to anything jobs, personal case so the hardworking comes in it.

We are having example of Elon Musk a founder and CEO of Tesla and many other multinational companies. While presenting his car Tesla one person questioned him 'why we should buy Tesla rather than BMW and Mercedes' he replied 'I donot say anyone to buy Tesla his own quality will force you to buy it. His confidence and self believe was that strong that he said that. This shows his passion and hard work behind that. Elon Musk grow from a small money to the world most wealthiest person. His passion made him to achieve that all. Elon Musk was having some money he made a rocket and launched but he failed, he was left with little money that could barely made him survive but he again made it.

It was do or die situation for him, but he succeeded because he doesn't cared any one and launched due to his passion which eventually made him to be there at today's position.

If we see in our society only 10% people go for passion rest they are forcefully dragged to get the jobs to earn and live only no purpose of life.

its very much important now adays to educate our youth to do what they love to do in order to achieve great things. we are also having example of Issac Newton, Thomas Edison etc. we need to tell our youth to search their passion and work on it from the younger age to achieve dreams. when the passion and your job or work meets it gives you mental peace, security and satisfaction in your own. we should be following our passion irrespective of that what people will say and how it looks like. we often chase money and inspire by people who are having big house, luxury cars and etc, but don't follow our own passion that will result you to get that all. we should arrange seminars to grow awareness and tell them how to explore your passion but everyone has some passion he/she needs to explore it.

'Great work comes from love and passion' the main idea or the theme of this topic is this. success achieved from passion and by loving the work you do is more meaningful than when it comes from doing what you are forcefully doing something. we should follow one person who chose his passion and take guidance from that person books or life or interviews or etc. rather than following many peoples. when you know your passion and you follow it you will have career selected from start, fulfilment from inside and excitement to do that above all you will not look at time that this much time is passed or this much time is left. It will power you to face challenges and break all obstacles in the way that are coming.
