(7) TRANSLATION

An old lady, Margaret, visits the Embankment train station of London every day, just to hear her dead husband Oswald Lawrence's voice announcing, "Mind the gap". This announcement was recorded in 1970, and by hearing it, Margaret feels close to her dead husband. Margaret contacted the Transport for London when this announcement was replaced with an electronic recording. When the organization learned about her feelings, they restored her husband's voice. Now, everyday, the announcement is done in that love-filled voice.
