Q3

- ① Why did Arab leaders change their attitude towards Pakistan after the conflict?

Arab leaders changed their attitude towards Pakistan due to their ability in the sphere of digital warfare. Witnessing Pakistan's prowess in the cyber arena as well as its calculated yet precise targets made the Arab leaders regard Pakistan as a force to be reckoned with.

- ② How did blackout in Dehli influence the psychological state of India during the conflict?

The blackout in Dehli influenced the psychological state of India by chilling their mode of communication. This effective crippling of Indian communication systems spread panic in Dehli as to whether the capital was under attack along with the looming threat of a nuclear attack.

- ③ If Pakistan had not launched turned out differently?

If Pakistan had not launched digital warfare after the missile retaliation, it might have not been recipient of open regional support and the conflict might have escalated. Without Pakistan's cyber warfare strategy, India might have been emboldened to prolong its traditional attacks and the western powers might not have openly began calling for restraint on both sides.

④ Compare and contrast the role of ... proved more decisive?

The conflict began with traditional warfare tactics of firing missiles into each others territory was a fierce one, but what really turned the table was the warfare on the digital domain. This strategy unleashed profound effects by disabling indian command systems and satellite networks. It turned the tide on the entire conflict and caught the attention of global and regional powers.

⑤ If the events of 10 May 2025 were to be ... 21st century?

This episode reveals the evolving nature of what is considered 'power' in the 21st century. Rather than being used in the traditional sense of military might, it focuses on the individual cyber capabilities. The more advanced and complex a nation is on the digital front, the more power they wield. Therefore, digital security systems and cyber warfare strategies are now ^{the} decisive factor in a conflict.
