Answer 1:

Arab leaders' attitude has changed towards Pakistan after the recent conflict between India and Pakistan. The reason is because Pakistan has been diplomatically isolated and aloof from the world due to internal struggles for a long. However, in the recent conflict, Pakistan utilized this as a chance to come out of that isolation. The whole world, especially Arab leader impressed by ~~not only~~ the military might but also the mastery in digital warfare. Now ~~Pakistan is regarded as~~ attempt in idiomatic and proverbial manner ~~now Pakistan is regarded as~~ please

Answer 2:

The blackout in Delhi influenced the psychological state of India during the conflict. As Pakistan first Pakistan's advanced air-defence system shot down the Indian squadrons and especially the mighty Rafales before even entering the airspace. Along with shooting down the jets, Pakistan also struck Indian military installations selectively, which disrupted communications all over the capital and instilled a fear and panic in New Delhi. This unexpected counterattack from Pakistan influenced the psychological state of India.

Answer 3:

If Pakistan had not launched digital warfare after the missile retaliation, the conflict would have been like the previous confrontations and it would be confined to the tanks and artillery. The conflict would possibly be escalated more because India has always been thinking of itself as a hegemon in South Asia especially in terms of military might and digital technology, however, the recent digital warfare put India into a big shock and provided it with the reality check. So, particularly digital warfare and shooting down the Rafales led India to seek ceasefire.

Answer 4:

The digital warfare proved to be more decisive in the recent conflict between India and Pakistan. Traditional military force is confined to the roar of tanks or the artillery and using planes and jets to destroy the infrastructure and military bases of the enemy. On the other hand digital warfare leads to the selective targets without even using tanks and planes. Digital warfare would bring more destruction with limited efforts such as disrupting communication, defense system and electricity. Hence, Digital warfare proved to be more decisive as in the context of the recent conflict, it brought clear and decisive impact. Which ultimately lead to the ceasefire

Answer 5: plz explain in the context

If the events of 10 May 2025 were to be viewed as a turning point, the meaning of 'power' in the 21st century has been changed. The word 'power' now is not merely confined to the conventional and traditional military might, but the domination in the digital warfare would be the major factor to be counted as 'power'. It changed the dynamics in a way that having the military arsenals and squadrons in majority does not ensure the domination, however, having the ability to utilize these arsenals and dominating digital arena would ensure the upperhand.
