Moral Decay and Modern Civilization

The Flip Sideof Man's ProgressE. H. Carrison (2)

05/20

Every era cultivated civilizations, geased by advancements that focused more on man's external development rather than internal development. It can be seen in modern age where the world is taken over by materialism and no room is left for conscience. Nearly all institutions including political, judicial, and social are compromised today because of materialism. The effects are not just limited to it, but to moral degradation as well. Where once man was striving for humanity and dignity, now he is striving for material gains. This has lead to increased comfort but at the expense of the loss of contentment and conscience. This worst kind of human decline can only be reversed by
