

(Q1) In recent times Pakistan's relations were very dim or unstable with the Arab Countries. However, Pakistan's response towards India in all fronts made them believe that Pakistan's military capacities make it a worthy regional strategic partner. Thus, this caused the sudden shift in the behavior of Arab leads towards Pakistan after the conflict.

(Q2) India was in the pride of its superior & war technologies, did not anticipated any such a response from Pakistani side, but when Pakistan retaliated, India had no other options but to go for blackout in New Delhi which clearly indicates their fear and frustration due to Pakistan's response. To conclude, Pakistan's response created fear which resulted in the blackout in New Delhi.
