Topic: Women Empowerment

Women empowerment does not only imply the freedom of women from oppression but also aims to give equal opportunities in social, economic, political, legal and media and literary sector of life as men. Because women empowerment plays important role in nation's progress. First comes the social dimension where participation of women is very important. Social dimension covers many areas like health, female education, equal justice and equal opportunities as men. Healthy and educated women will impact society in a positive way as it will reduce gender differences, hence gives pace to economic growth. Currently in South Asia, Pakistan is facing economic challenges and one of reasons is (1st) the lowest ranking of women in education, literacy and health as per World Bank's report. Hence social (2nd) sector plays key role in improving the economic growth of society. Besides social dimension, economic sector is another realm where empowerment of women is crucial. Economic empowerment includes equal job opportunities in business, labour and in sports sector. Studies have shown that more participation of women in business, labour and sports can improve overall economic activity. Iceland is the evidence where there is high percentage of women in economic sector and ranks eight in the world in terms of GDP per capita. Like social and economic empowerment, political rights also hold great importance. The purpose of women empowerment in politics is to enhance the fundamental rights of women in decision-making. In most developing countries small number of (fx) women are found in the legislative assemblies as well as in other political institutions. Men has dominated the political world to the point the in Pakistan it is a common practice in tribal areas that they did not give vote to women candidates. For political empowerment to be nurtured, empowerment of women in legal sphere is also crucial, where women became able to know about family, labour, political and security laws. In this way women will be given equal opportunity as men to eliminate social evils of injustices from society, and will pace the progress of nation. Unfortunately women, in both developed and developing nations, are less in legal sector than men. Last but not least, the world of media and literature needs women in a way that it will inspire girls, raise awareness about gender-related issues, and will ultimately leading to greater societal change and progress. Though, in the whole world, women empowerment in various sectors of life (isx) has been remained a distant dream, but it needs to be fulfilled by nations in order to become progressive country of the world. The paragraph concludes ^{with} (in) the words of Napoleon Bonaparte, ^{which states} that, "give me a good mothers and I will give you good nations", as these words are (emphasin) emphasizing the role of women which ensures the positive development of country.
