Beyond Wealth: The Value of Duty

Truly noble, courageous and literate individuals do not make money the main goal of their lives. Just as people enjoy food but do not live for it. Similarly, clear-headed individuals enjoy earning money but it is not their life's purpose. A righteous soldier, a clergyman and a doctor prefer work over money. For all brave and properly educated professionals, work and duty come first and money is secondary, it is important but not the ultimate aim of life.
