Women Empowerment

Michelle Obama once said, "There is no limit to what we, as women, can accomplish." Some girls are told they can be anything - others are told to stay silent - The difference between the two is empowerment. Empowering women means enabling them to achieve their goals by giving them all the basic rights, including freedom of speech, equality, and independence they deserve. Men and women are like two wheels of a vehicle, and it is impossible for the vehicle to run if one wheel doesn't function properly - Women constitute almost 50% of society, and empowering women is just as important as empowering men, because when we empower a woman, we just don't uplift an individual; we lay the foundation for a stronger, more progressive society. Many people associate women's empowerment with a negative connotation, but that is a misconception. Throughout history, women have played important roles in every field - From the battlefields of war to the frontlines of medicine, women have always been fighters. It is time we recognize that empowering women is not a favour, it is a necessity. Only by giving women equal opportunities can we build a just, and forward-moving society.
