Work Before Wealth

It is impossible for a truly educated or brave person to prioritize money as their life's main goal. Just as people enjoy food but do not live solely for it, healthy minds may like earning but seek purpose beyond wealth.

Soldiers fight for victory, not for pay. Clergymen preach for faith, not for money. Likewise good doctors aim to heal rather than earn fees. In all noble professions, duty and purpose come first, while money, though important, remains secondary.
