

WOMEN EMPOWERMENT

Women empowerment means a choice that a woman can make independently in life. In ancient history there were no rights for women. She was not able to make decisions either professionally or in house. But now the time has changed, The women should be given equal rights to make her powerful in every field of life. The women can do everything as she has more capabilities than men. We should educate women as someone beautifully said that education of men is only limited to their own selves but the education of women can build up the nations. The development and progress of many countries rely on women. They are more strong, capable, and responsible in their work. They provide more help in economic, cultural, educational and political field. Even today in agriculture there are many women who are working but are not equally paid. This difference of gender equality should be ended. The women should be given a chance to participate in every field. In political history the first Prime Minister which was a woman in Pakistan was Benazir Bhutto. The status represents the self-determination and confidence. In western countries the lot of change has been done regarding women empowerment. Women have many rights. They can do a job in technology, they are going into space, performing physical activities in olympic games, doing many jobs, playing cricket. These all are the criteria which make the women stronger and confident. It is not gender specific. If the women are given a chance to stand equally with men
